THE MAPLE GROVE EXAMINER

ESTABLISHED 1923

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF MARTIN STILLER

MARTIN STILLER NAMED EDITOR

BY LAURA EASTMAN

It's official. The Maple Grove Examiner has a new editor-in-chief following the abrupt departure of longtime employee Aaron Judge.

Judge's replacement is former resident and longtime newsman Martin Stiller, who has spent the last 15 years as an entertainment reporter in Los Angeles, California.

Stiller began his career in journalism right here at The Examiner where he started as a sports reporter.

Stiller told The Examiner "I am thrilled to be back" and that he has a lot of ideas to make "the paper the flagship of our city once again."

The new editor has already met with Examiner staff and was "pleased with the quality of writers we have."

Stiller promises "big changes in the weeks ahead."

"I am thrilled to be back," Stiller told The Examiner. "Not only am I coming back to my hometown that I have missed terribly since living abroad, but I am looking forward to being the new editor-in-chief of such a revered and esteemed publication."

Businessman Arturo Nardelli donates 50k to new library fund

Business man and entrepreneur, Arturo Nardelli, has made a $50,000 donation for the new Maple Grove Library.

“it’s a pleasure to help out,” Nardelli said in a recent phone interview with The Examiner.

The new library, that still has a two million dollar deficit, is hoping to open soon.
